INVENTORS NETWORK

welcomes

Douglas E Huesdash

as he presents

21st Century American Pioneers, The Entrepreneur

Let's talk about thinking outside the box.

Small business people really have their job cut out for them. Whether due to limited resources, lack of support from family and friends, or becoming discouraged from the news on TV about the economy, starting a business is tough. The reality is, in this new century, in this new economy, it is going to take courage, creativity, and a certain level of fearlessness to survive in the work world. Together with a group of independent entrepreneurs, with the help of a local inventor, a new idea is coming to life. This presentation will highlight the determination of the inventor but more importantly how individuals coming together can have the sum of the individuals exceed their individual capabilities. This presentation will talk about the value of forming peer groups, the impact marketing will have on your business moving ahead, using a unique platform to help the world look at small business owners in a positive fashion. The goal of this project that will be shared is to Encourage and Empower, through Education and Entertainment.

Douglas E Huesdash is a reformed CPA who owned a small manufacturing company that was started in his garage with no money and grew to 45,000 square feet. Since passing the business on to new ownership, he has been pursuing other entrepreneurial activities, working on his MBA, and is privileged to be a consultant with the Mi-SBTDC.

Presenting with Doug will be a mystery group of entrepreneurs who will be able to contribute much to the conversation and share how these new ideas have helped them look at their businesses and doing business in the future differently.
